CHILDREN ON MEDICATION:

a primer for school personnel

by Kenneth D. Gadow

How does medication help children? What are the behavioral effects of drugs and the major side effects? How are drugs interrelated with the educational process? What should teachers do in various situations?

This primer answers many of these questions. It is designed to assist educators in interdisciplinary interaction and to focus more clearly on educational issues.

In the first chapter, some of the fundamental concepts and terms relating to drug therapy are explained. Subsequent chapters cover the use of medication with regard to specific childhood disorders, such as hyperactivity, convulsive disorders, mental retardation, school phobia, cerebral palsy, and childhood psychosis.

When available, prevalence figures are reported for the given disorder and for the use of drug therapy in the general school population, and in special education programs. April 1979 122 pp. No. 191 $7.75
